

CREATING WITH A CONSULTING MINDSET

Your team member is considering enrolling in this course.
Here's what you need to know:

Higher team engagement leads to higher customer engagement

That's why we created Creating with a Consulting Mindset, to train your team in effective collaboration and strategic insight. These are skills they can learn (and master) within weeks without a large time investment—with an immediate impact on project outcomes, team communication, and customer results.

Why would business leaders want to train their teams to think like consultants?

The developers, designers and others on your product team are already experts in their subject area. Our course trains them to leverage their expertise within the context of business strategy — and communicate their ideas more clearly.

Who is this for?

This comprehensive course is designed for developers, designers, and all members of software development teams in both software development agencies and product companies.
